Birdseye view of beautiful Mirror Lake, nestled high in Utah's Uinta Mountains. Hayden Peak, left center, is 12,500 feet high.

population of nearly 30,000 and is growing rapidly with the burgeoning steel industry at nearby Geneva and Ironton.

At Provo is the Brigham Young University with an enrollment of nearly 6,000, and a growing campus boasting two new additions—the two and one-half million dollar science Building and the new million dollar Field House which is the largest auditorium in the state. On Utah Lake, largest natural body of fresh water west of the Great Lakes, sailing and motorboating are popular pastimes. There is a fine boat harbor about three miles west of the city. Motor boat races are held annually on Memorial Day and July 4th. The harbor becomes an excellent skating rink in winter.

This modern city on U. S. Highways 91 and 50, about 45 miles south of Salt Lake City, was first visited by white men September 23, 1776.

Etienne Provot, a young French-Canadian trapper, for whom the city was named, explored Utah Valley in 1825—twenty-two years before the Mormons.

Provo Canyon. Leading north and east from Provo is Provo Canyon, traversed by U. S. Highway 189 and by the Provo River, one of the best fishing streams in the state. It is a popular summer picnic area and many summer homes are maintained here. At Bridal Veil Falls, part way up the canyon from Provo, a new automobile park has been constructed which will accommodate 75 cars. A tributary canyon